Levis are back, better than ever

They've been cut, torn, razored, bleached and customised, but the iconic Levi's 501 jeans are still a certified wardrobe staple. 501's have been pop culture's uniform of choice for decades, spotted on the likes of Mick Jagger, Andy Warhol, Jean-Michel Basquiat and Madonna, and today, Levi's are recreating their heyday with the re-release of the original 501 style.

Reminiscent of the fit and wash worn by female stars in TV hit shows of the nineties Beverly Hills 90210, Melrose Place and Friends, denim addicts can now grab their own pair of 501 jeans. Available in a faded sunworn wash, these great fitting jeans can be worn just how you like them...high-waisted and belted, or low-slung and baggy.

501s are now available at General Pants Stores RRP$149.95 - visit www.generalpants.com.au for store locations.
